How are parabolas used in real life.

Kelly almost finished with the Parabola chapter in his math class. She is familiar with the general form of a parable and began to notice the use of parable around her. One thing you haven't understood yet is why satellite TV dishes are 3D parable. It's sure it's not a coincidence, but he doesn't know what it is about a parabolic form that is important. You know? There is a very interesting property of Parabola. This is the fact that all parabolas have the same shape. Or, in the language of geometry, each two parabolas are similar to each other. This means that any parable can be resized in or out to produce another parable exactly the same shape. This can be surprising, because Parabola where $\forall x \in \{2\} \vee$ has a coefficient of great appearance certainly very "stature" of parable with a small coefficient when examined on the same domain, as shown in the domain, as shown in the same domain, as shown in the Graphs domain below. a. High and lean - enlarged by 4x; b. Short and wide; but when one of the parables is properly scaled, these parabolas are identical: a. High and lean - enlarged by 4x; b. Short and wide; this fact on the parabolas can be seen from the point of view of the algebra since all the parabolas are generated by a line and a point not on that line. This configuration of generators two of these configurations must have the same shape. From the analytical geometry point of view, there were two factors that could influence the shape of the parable. The first is the distance o o onoc led amrof al exacty the same o o in the line and point are of the same distance to each other. So also the forms that generate two of these configurations must have the same shape. The second factor is the angle of the parable. The first is the slope between the radius and the height at any point. It is a little more complicated. It is not at all obvious that the short cones, squares and high cones and skinny produced parable of the same shape, to. Tall and Skinny: b. Short and wide according to what we found, any parable produced by slicing any cone has caused an equation of this form: $\forall (y = a x^2) \vee$ we want to demonstrate that if we generate two parabolas of the genre, which they have the same shape. So suppose to use two CONE buildings and come with these parabolas: $\forall (y = a_1 \cdot (x^2)) \wedge \forall (y = a_2 \cdot x^2)$. We want to show that there is some factor of scale, which narrows or enlarged $\forall (y = a_1 \cdot x^2) \vee \forall (y = a_2 \cdot x^2)$. To maintain an equal form, the scale factor must influence both $\forall (x \cdot y)$ and $\forall (y \cdot x)$ text {variables}). So we have to find an $\forall (f(y))$ such that $\forall (f(y) = a_1 \cdot (f(x))^2) \wedge \forall (f(y) = a_2 \cdot (f(x))^2)$. This $\forall (f(y))$ always exists for non-negative numbers $\forall (a_1 \cdot \{1\}) \wedge \forall (a_2 \cdot \{2\})$. So the parabolas are really the same shape. If $\forall (a \cdot \forall)$ is less than zero, then the parabola can be reflected vertically to produce a parable of the same shape and with a positive coefficient $\forall (a \cdot \forall)$. Diocle (à Let's directly 1180 BC) was a mathematician from ancient Greece, of which we know very little. However, we know enough from some documents that he has thought of an important parable application.
